CHRONIC MALARIA

Forms of Chronic Malaria, but all are Equally Difficult of Cure. There are three kinds of chronic ma laria, namely, that from which originally was contracted in a malarial district as simple chills and fever—acute malaria—and when the swamps were im-proved and the germs became nearly extinct the disease became chronic. The second form is caused by continuing to live in the malarial districts, in spite of the malaria, and acquiring the chronic form, although taking quinine all the time. The third is that disease which many people acquire every fall when they are not entirely well in other ways. The symptoms of these three forms of chronic malaria are exactly the same: chilly rigors, coated tongue, bad breath, disturbed digestion, con-stant headache, constipation, billiousness, and many other symptoms which the malarial subject knows all too well. Now, in nearly all of these cases the patients have tried quinine, expecting to be cured; but in every case have been disappointed. Quinine will not cure chronic malaria. How many failures have demonstrated this fact over and over again. But there is a remedy which rarely fails to cure promptly and permanently. It has cured thous ands of cases of chronic malaria and is curing them right along. This hemedy is Pe-ru-na. It can be procured at any drug store, and should be given a trial by every one who is suffering from chronic malaria.
